

Tony Vaught is President of Professional Aquaculture Services. Tony has 35 years of experience in aquaculture development and production including finfish culture, anadromous fish, and larval development. He also has extensive experience and knowledge of management and supervisory techniques, international business relations, the U.S. Department of Commerce Foreign Expert Program, project development and construction, and website development and marketing. Tony has been instrumental in developing new techniques for the domestication and spawning of a variety of fresh and salt water fish such as channel catfish, sturgeon, and striped bass. Tony also provides production, marketing, and consulting services to fish growers and suppliers to the aquaculture industry. Tony has been a Board member with the California Aquaculture Association (CAA) since 1979, Co-chair of the California Department of Fish and Game Aquaculture Industry Advisory Committee and the California Farm Bureau Aquaculture Animal health and Welfare committee. As a private farm advisor, Tony provides advice and direction for established and new ventures. This includes site selection, husbandry, and marketing.
